Independent Lens Black Memorabilia explores the world of racist material, both antique and newly produced, that propagate demeaning representations of African Americans. From industrial China to the rural South to Brooklyn, the film shines a light on those who reproduce, consume and reclaim racially-charged items, from banks to Mammy kitchenware, confederate flags, Nazi insignia and other ephemera.

education News

What do science lessons and family bonding have in for low-income moms and dads who don't speak English, ensuring their young children are on a path toward school-readiness can be daunting, especially when access to quality childcare is often out of reach. When the opportunity to join KLRU's Ready to Learn (RTL) came around for Mariel, she enrolled with her three-year-old son Brandon, knowing that they both would benefit from this early childhood resource.

"The importance in involving myself in Brandon's education is because I've heard that at this age kids start discovering things for themselves. They are storing everything, like a little sponge, in their brains."
